WILTON FOLKS—Guess the Muscatine Journal does not like you—after all your efforts and the excellent cooperation—the fine crowd you had there Wednesday—THEY REFUSED TO EVEN MENTION THE NAME WILTON—still they send their solicitors up there to get subscriptions—it's child's play, isn't it—OH WELL—if they're too good for you, maybe some of you Wilton folks will be saying "We are too good for them"—they will refuse to mention your BIG accomplishments and some of you will refuse to renew their SMALL paper—it takes personal jealousies and grievances to bring out the characteristics of an editor. Anyway, you Wilton folks drew Clyde Rabedaux the publisher of Muscatine's second paper to your city—that's an honor? ? ?

GRASSHOPPERS AND DEATH—We have passed over the GRASSHOPPER SCARE in Iowa—no more are the Iowa farmers worrying about the couple dozen grasshoppers that jumped over the Mississippi river on our western boundary—to look at the pictures the Department of Agriculture put in the papers—the farmers would think that whole fields of corn disappeared OVER NIGHT—well it worked O. K.—the grasshoppers possibly $50,000 or more for poison bran—still we had the grasshoppers—but according to the Medical Liberty Avalanche—we now have some dead ones—and one report tells of a family killed by the poison—if this is true—here's hoping that some of our Department of Agriculture may have to pay some of a few hundred thousands of dollars—then maybe the tax payers will learn their lesson—GRASSHOPPERS—BUNK!—when will the public "catch on," to these "secrets"?

CORN! CORN! CORN!—papers say—Iowans will ask Hoover for aid—boys, boys, learn to stand on your own hind legs and QUIT ASKING HOOVER FOR ANYTHING—because YOU WON'T GET IT—no other President will get it for you—nor will any politician—do like union labor has done—get in ONE FARM ORGANIZATION AND CUT OUT ALL OTHERS—then you will command what you want instead of begging for it—we shall wait and see what Dan Turner, President Hoover and the BUNKER whom Turner selected to go also, will accomplish—every time you hear about any committee being organized to see somebody—there is always a BUNKER TIED TO IT—some day the farmers will learn—you never heard of labor committees going anywhere with a banker at their heels—wake up farmers—WAKE UP—they have been kicking you as a football and soon the PUNCTURE WILL BE GIVEN—then you are FINISHED. Let's start that single unit farm plan at ONCE.

KEOKUK COUNTY FOLKS—since my talk in your county—many have written me for the report I mentioned about cattle and farm valuation in your county—for the benefit of all I give it herein—you had 41,283 cattle in Keokuk County in 1920 when government made the census—in 1930 you had 33,644—you have 7,639 LESS TODAY THAN 10 YEARS AGO—your farm land and buildings in your county were valued at $79,764,366 in 1920—$42,068,063 in 1930—just $37,696,303 LESS TODAY THAN 10 YEARS AGO. Get busy—organize that single unit farm organization or you won't have anything left in another 10 years but mortgages and receipts.

DAY OF REST—but not for me—today I have to speak at THREE DIFFERENT TOWNS—which ought to keep me busy for one day at least—this afternoon I am to speak at Mt. Vernon at 1:30, Keokuk at 4 and at Marengo in the evening at 8 o'clock—but I enjoy these speaking dates—they give me a chance to meet so many thousands of good Iowa folks—and find out how they feel about everything—MOST OF THEM are getting FULLY AWAKE to the fact that the SINGLE UNIT FARM PLAN is the one thing to end THE DEPRESSION.

Police Baffled in Yacht Murder

NO SOLUTION TO PUZZLING SLAYING NEAR

Officials Are Unable To Find Trace of Two Pirates

HUNTINGTON, N. Y. — (INS)—Solution of the mysterious murder of Benjamin P. Collings, Stamford, Conn., yachtman who was bound hand and foot on his cabin cruiser, the Penguin, on the night of Sept. 9 and thrown into the murky waters of Long Island sound was apparently no nearer Saturday night than when the crime was first discovered.

The authorities admitted, somewhat ruefully, that they were completely baffled. They have run down a number of rather slim clues, but they have failed to unearth a "lead" that could be construed as significant.

No Trace of Pirates
They have been unable to find the slightest trace of the two "pirates" whom Mrs. Lillian Collings, the slain man's widow, says attacked her husband, kidnapped her and left her five-year-old daughter, Barbara, alone on the drifting Penguin.

Even the throwing of "new blood" into the police investigation has failed to give hope of any immediate solution of the crime. The new help has come from Felix Di Martini, former star of the New York detective force and a prominent figure in the celebrated Hall-Mills case.

Di Martini, who has been employed by the Suffolk county officials to assist them, officially began his duties Saturday morning.

MOB DESCENDS ON ROMEO JAIL

State Police Attempt To Disperse Crowd At Clarksburg

CLARKSBURG, W. Va. — (INS)—A crowd of almost 4,000 persons Saturday night descended on the Harrison county jail determined to wrest Harry F. Powers, the blue-eyed slayer, away from his police captors.

The mob, hastily summoned, took positions on the jail steps and at all entrances, attempting to disperse the crowd with tear gas and machine guns.

The mob descended on the jail at midnight as if according to some pre-arranged plan of attack. Gathering on a hill at the rear of the jail, they began a march on the building demanding that Powers be released to them for vengeance.

First reports were that the police were successfully holding the crush of frenzied demonstrators back.

Witnesses reported that tear gas bombs were being freely used on the mob, demanding that the slayer of his widow and three children be surrendered to them.

According to reports, the crowd entered Clarksburg on foot, by automobile and train, storming the jail at midnight.

Hurried calls for additional police reinforcements were dispatched to state police headquarters.

The couple had been bathing near the Grandview lighthouse in Chesapeake bay. The professor maintained that his wife met death accidentally.

Notorious Bank Robber Once Lived as a Farmer in Iowa

JAMES M. CLARK USED Home as Bandits' Meeting Place

DES MOINES, Ia. — (INS)—James M. Clark, now serving a sentence for bank robbery in the Indiana state penitentiary, and allegedly the "boss" of the Lincoln, Neb., National bank formerly well known through Iowa and his farm, between Mitchellville and Altoona, Ia., was used for a "hangout" for his gang, it was made known Saturday.

Clark, negotiating to buy a large tract of land in Polk county and although his gang operated mainly in Illinois, his Iowa home was used as a rendezvous.

The Lincoln bank robbery which netted $250,000 is said to have been the largest such "job" ever pulled. "Gus" Winkler, pal of Fred "Killer" Burke has already been captured and returned to Lincoln to face charges.

According to police, Clark and his confederates, one of whom was Walter E. Detrich who is also serving a term for the Clinton, Ind., bank robbery with Clark, operated out of Burlington, Ill., with the "Burlington Eddie" Lerue gang and also out of St. Louis with Winkler and the Burke crew. Others known to have been the former Iowan's associates were "Springfield Johnnie" Lane, still at large and a man known as Chicago Blackie, both known desperadoes.

Clark, authorities said, is wanted for several Illinois bank robberies and may be implicated in several Iowa holdups. He was known in Des Moines and was said to have operated a gambling house here several years ago.

The Burke gang, ruled by "The Killer" used several smaller gangs as fences for their operations, police said. Burke, said to have been the gunner at the St. Valentine's day massacre in Chicago when seven hoodlums were mowed down several years ago, is now serving a life sentence for shooting a policeman in St. Joseph, Mich., when apprehended for a minor traffic violation.

Huge Liquor Ring Leader Is Arrested at Des Moines

DES MOINES, Ia. — (INS)—Kenneth Sonderle, alleged by federal authorities to be a leader in a huge liquor ring which has operated here for several years, Saturday was being held in county jail awaiting arraignment on five indictments on 21 liquor counts for which they were indicted by a federal jury at Ottumwa Friday.

He was arrested shortly after midnight Saturday together with his wife, Faye, at their luxurious home here, by deputy Marshall Charles Antles. Antles went to the Sonderlester home immediately upon receiving word from Ottumwa of the indictments.

The action of the jury follows what is said to be the most extensive, thorough liquor investigation ever conducted in Iowa.

GET NEW LIGHT ON ROBBER TRIO

One of Men Arrested At Ottumwa Wanted In Rock Island

OTTUMWA, Ia. — (INS)—More light was thrown onto the police records of the three alleged bank robbers captured after a game of golf at the Ottumwa golf club a week ago. James E. Riden, chief of the Iowa state bureau of investigation, was informed that T. J. Marvin, one of the desperadoes, was wanted in Rock Island, Ill., for robbery.

Marvin was arrested with R. J. Kaiser, and J. Enright when burglar tools, explosives, ammunition, and guns were found in their expensive auto.

Marvin, the report said, was known under the aliases of George L. Dempsey and R. F. Hull, Illinois police said in 1928 he was associated with Stanley Kors, a known safe blow.

A report from Peoria revealed that Kaiser, whose real name is Robert Kelso, had records for stickups, raiding box cars, and accessory after the fact of murder.

Enright is wanted in Belleville, Ill., on a robbery charge for which Ottumwa police expect to receive a $200 reward.

Chief Riden said that Nebraska authorities believe the Rio conducted with bank robberies in that state.

Will Probably Inject Self Into Soldier Bonus Fight

By GEORGE E. DURNO
ORANGE, Va. — (INS)—President Hoover Saturday made a last-minute decision to attend the American Legion convention opening Monday in Detroit. He will leave his Rapidan camp, where he arrived Saturday noon, Sunday night and address the legionnaires at their opening session.

This unexpected move was generally interpreted to mean the president has decided to inject himself personally into the bonus fight, which will be one of the big features of the Veterans' assembly.

It is pretty well conceded the legion is preparing to demand of congress that world war compensation certificates be given immediate full face value, which would enable the veterans to collect at once the remaining 50 per cent due them.

As soon as the president reached his camp Saturday afternoon he pitched into the task of preparing his address. A stenographer accompanied him and he dictated to her until dinner time.

Will Study Conditions
It was not thought, however, the executive would confine himself to a discussion of the financial evils of bonus payment at this time.

The legion convention affords him an excellent sounding board from which to reach the nation with a message outlining his views of the economic situation with its intertwined subjects of unemployment and financial distress here and abroad.

The president's unexpected decision to take the rostrum at Detroit probably was reached Friday night at a dinner conference of Secretary of State Stimson, Secretary of War Clegg, and

Journal and Council Tilt

At the last meeting of the city council the question of rates for printing the city proceedings came up. This paper accepted the city's offer in good spirit and to cooperate with the council. The Journal refused to print it, and the council did the next best thing, under the circumstances, by ordering the proceedings posted.

Let's review the Journal's policy towards Muscatine. Members of our present council well know that a few years ago the Muscatine Journal used every power of its pens and columns to prevent this city from ever starting a municipal light plant.

They took the side of Davenporters and public utilities and were satisfied for our citizens to continue to pay 12 1-2 cents for electricity. Members of our council now well remember that fight. Only one newspaper, it was 100 per cent against the majority of the people and the promoters of the city plant were placed at great disadvantage—but finally they won and during the fight many curse words were thrown towards the Journal and its policy. Even talk of another newspaper was in the air, so that the people could have the "people's voice" instead of Wall street's domination.

After all was said and done, after the dirty deal that was accorded the majority of Muscatiners, the council, willing to play ball, offered them their share of the city printing at a rate that we accepted.

Now to show their greed for the almighty dollar, they slap the people in Muscatine again by refusing to take only that price that Mr. Adler of Davenport O. K.'s as the controlling interest in their paper have when there are those that gave affidavits to the effect that Journal solicitors approached Muscatine people and told them not to worry about the payment, just sign your name for a year. Other of their subscribers who are paying good cash should sit up and take notice of that.

On top of all, they not only refuse to help the council out with accepting the printing of the city proceedings, after the councilmen tried to play ball with them, but this same Adler crowd of

Heavy Fighting is Reported In China With Japan Troops

COUNCIL BLUFFS, Ia. — (INS)—Minerva Connors, 14, and Lucille King, 12, Onawa, Ia., girls, Saturday confessed that the story they told Council Bluffs police Friday of being kidnapped from the streets of their home town and being brought here by a motorist was a hoax.

According to the girls they begged a ride from a passing motorist and when he let them out at Council Bluffs they decided on their kidnapping story lest their parents punish them.

The number of casualties among the Chinese was not known, but they were reliably reported to have been much heavier than among the Japanese forces, the Chinese forces in Manchuria were overwhelmingly superior in numbers to those of the Japanese, but the latter are better trained and equipped.

The fighting without Saturday shifted from the vicinity of Mukden, which the Japanese now occupy, to the vicinity of Changchung, in Kirin Province, Kuan Wan Cheng-tze, near Peiping, were cut and practically all of the news coming out of the "war zone" was routed via Dairen and Korea.

Both Japanese and Chinese government officials were reported to be fighting back desperately.

Communication Cut
All traffic and communications between Mukden and Harbin, on the important Chinese-Eastern railway, and between Mukden and Tientsin, near Peiping, were cut and practically all of the news coming out of the "war zone" was routed via Dairen and Korea.

Both Japanese and Chinese government officials were reported to be fighting back desperately.

Two Are Injured When Plane And Train Figure in Crash

CHARLOTTE, N. C. — (INS)—What is believed to be the first plane-train crash ever recorded occurred at Harrisburg, 16 miles north of here late Saturday and resulted in the injury of two persons, the pilot and a passenger of the air craft.

The crash occurred when a plane piloted by John Lowe developed motor trouble and he sought to make a forced landing.

Sweeping from the skies on to the railroad tracks, the air machine was struck by a southbound Southern Railway passenger train.

The plane was demolished and the pilot and his passenger, whose name was not learned, were hurled into a nearby cotton field.

The injured were picked up by members of the train crew and taken to Harrisburg for treatment. They were believed in serious conditions.

According to eye witnesses, the plane, flying at a low altitude, suddenly nosed toward the ground as the motor stopped. The railroad trackage offered the only possible emergency landing spot, and as the plane settled to the ground, it was swept from the tracks by the crushing locomotive.

CONGRESS MAY VOTE ON ISSUE NEXT SESSION

None But Rashest of Beer Advocates Can See Victory

By George R. Holmes

WASHINGTON — (INS)—The war of words in Washington over legalizing beer, which has swirled about the White House this week to the extreme embarrassment of administration officials, seems likely to have one tangible result, instead of President Hoover's ultimate attitude on the question.

It is that the forthcoming session of congress probably will vote on it. Both the advocates of beer and its opponents were inclined Saturday night to agree there will be a showdown, and both were inclined to welcome it.

None but the rashest of the beer advocates pretend to believe they can win without some gesture of approval on Mr. Hoover's part. But they believe their gains have been noticeable since the business depression and the widespread unemployment that they are willing to see a poll taken.

Dry's Not Adverse to Fight
The drys would not be adverse to a show-down because they are sublimely confident of their ability to beat down every beer bill, of whatever character, that they believe that the defeat would have a salutary effect in checking the widespread agitation and propaganda for the return of beer as a measure of economic relief.

The disclosure that the White House had called upon the census bureau and the treasury for employment and revenue statistics concerning the manufacture of beer was disconcerting to the drys, but they remain confident that President Hoover will "stay dry," as they put it, and that his presumed interest in beer statistics is for the

TEACHER FREED ON LARGE BOND

Accused Love Triangle Slayer's Trial to Begin Wednesday

By EDWARD B. LOCKETT

HAMPTON, Va. — (INS)—With the defendant at liberty on $15,000 bail. The stage was set in peaceful Tidewater, Virginia, Saturday for the trial of the strange case of Professor Elisha Kent Kane, 37 year old University of Tennessee romance language teacher charged with the murder of his pretty wife, Jenny.

The case will get under way technically Wednesday when preliminary hearing of the warrant charge of murder will begin.

The trial will spread on the criminal court records of the county a story unique in the history of a locality where murders are rare. It will determine whether or not a tall good looking scholar deliberately drowned his wife in order that he might kind another flame.

The defendant was resting quietly Saturday night in the Chamberlain hotel at Old Point Comfort, Va., several miles away, after spending six days here. Saturday morning when a Des Moines-Davenport bus was destroyed by fire.

Hamilton hearing the screams of his passengers, halted the bus and the passengers escaped with their luggage.

A cash bond of $15,000 was finally deposited in a Hampton bank Saturday and accepted by Judge C. Vernon Sparteely as bail for the defendant. Prosecution officials blocked by commonwealth Attorney Roland D. Cook sought first to bond Kane's release on bail, and when this effort failed, asked for a bond of $100,000 in view of the substance and character of the defendant and his ability to pay.

NORMAN BAKER TO ADDRESS 3 CROWDS TODAY

Muscatine Man Rests At Waterloo After Two Addresses

Following two speaking engagements Saturday and in preparation for three today, Norman Baker of Muscatine spent Saturday night in Waterloo resting. The local man spoke before large crowds at Fairbank, where the meeting was held in the opera house and at Washington Park, Waterloo, Saturday.

The Fairbank meeting was held in the afternoon and the Waterloo engagement in the evening.

At both the meetings Mr. Baker discussed the farm problems and urged the farmers to organize a single farm unit for opposition to the present depression and the unfair methods of Wall street capitalists and other kindred groups.

Today Mr. Baker will speak at Mt. Vernon, Ia., at 1:30 p. m., at Keosauqua at 4 p. m. and at Marengo at 8 p. m.

Large crowds are expected to attend each of these meetings and many persons who have previously heard Mr. Baker discuss his program for bringing the farmers out of the depression are expected to hear him speak.

The speaker's addresses are of general interest to both the city and rural residents as the carrying out of his plan would mean benefits to the city merchant as well as the farmer.

VEIN AILMENT CURE AFFECTED

Lady Suffers Fifteen Years; Relieved at Baker Hospital

It requires a fertile imagination to realize what the feeling must be to suffer from any cause for 15 years, then to awaken to find the day the commencement of happiness. The old saying is true, "Behind every dark cloud, is a silver lining."

That was the experience of Mrs. William McC— who does not care to have her name appear in print. Living 12 miles north of Muscatine, in Wilton, she came to the Baker Hospital at Muscatine even after reading the numerous items published about the place. She related that where there is a lot of smoke about anyone shouting "cures" there must be some cures.

She was bothered with varicose veins, the suffering of which nobody knows except those who are troubled with them, and she tells the whole story best in her own words which she wrote for the Baker Hospital, as follows:

"Muscatine, Iowa, Sept. 16, 1931."

"Baker Hospital, Muscatine, Iowa."

"Gentlemen: I had suffered with varicose veins for fifteen years. I hadn't gone to any doctor until an ulcer started on my right leg, because I thought there was no help. I had so much pain that I decided to come to the Baker Hospital for an examination."

"I received my first treatment the fifth of February and was sent home the seventeenth of March. I came back for an examination and the doctor told me that my troubles were over."

"This is the first time for about two years that I can truthfully say that I am not suffering with my legs. I am very glad to say that the doctor has gone and he has been the cause of my freedom from the Baker Hospital because I realize the wonderful work they are doing for the welfare of the people."

"Muscatine is fast becoming recognized as a medical center where cures are made of many ailments without operations, radium or x-ray, and the Baker Hospital staff is to be congratulated."

In fact, to be frank about the matter, considerable disappointment has been voiced about the man who succeeded Rockne and it has been widely forecast he will remain at South Bend only one year. These gloomy persons see a wretched season for the Irish this year and look for Madigan, Dorais, Stuhldreher or some other former great at the Indiana football hub to take his place in 1932.

Against Anderson there must be marked up a certain lack of confidence, both by himself and his players. Also, every football team on the Irish schedule is extremely anxious to be the team, or the first

The Bright Side

Rockne, Gone, Still Looms In Arena of American Football

Question Now to Be: Can the Irish Win Without Him?

By COPELAND C. BURG INS Sports Writer

NEW YORK—In these days of unemployment there's one job that almost nobody wants. Its trying to fill the shoes of the late Knute Rockne, football coach at Notre Dame University.

"Hunk" Anderson, Rockne's assistant last year, has consented to attempt the task.

A great deal has been said about Rockne and Anderson. It has been stated that Rockne was a man who built for the future and that he had trained Anderson with the idea that he would succeed him.

That may be true. But Rockne had no idea he would not be coaching at Notre Dame this fall and for many years to come. If he was training Anderson to fill his shoes, he had not completed his mission—that's certain.

Anderson's appointment was somewhat of a surprise. It was thought some one with more major experience—Anderson has never been a head coach—would be named; the public looked for Rockne's successor as some one with a big name or at least a coach with dash and color, which Anderson does not have to any great extent.

He probably will not cut the figure at Notre Dame that Harry Stuhldreher, now at Villanova and one of the "immortals" Four Horsemen of one of Rockne's greatest glories, would have. Also Anderson probably will not catch the fancy of the public as Charley Dora of Detroit or "Slip" Madigan of St. Mary's in Oakland, California, might have done.

Considerable disappointment in fact, to be frank about the matter, considerable disappointment has been voiced about the man who succeeded Rockne and it has been widely forecast he will remain at South Bend only one year. These gloomy persons see a wretched season for the Irish this year and look for Madigan, Dorais, Stuhldreher or some other former great at the Indiana football hub to take his place in 1932.

Against Anderson there must be marked up a certain lack of confidence, both by himself and his players. Also, every football team on the Irish schedule is extremely anxious to be the team, or the first team, better yet, to put the Rambler on the wrong end of a score and erase at last that ever familiar headline—"Notre Dame Wins."

In favor of the new coach it may be noted that he has had some experience in handling the Irish. When Rockne was ill in 1930 Anderson acted for him and his work as first assistant coach gave him a fine knowledge of Rockne's ideas. He has plenty of material this season, with fast backs and another great Notre Dame line.

Then, too, he will have the assistance of Jack Chevigny, the junior coach, a Rockne-trained man.

Much In His Favor From the "psychology" standpoint there is much in Anderson's favor.

The memory of Rockne is going to prove a well of inspiration to the 1931 team. They will be out there ready to give everything to keep the Rockne slate untarnished.

Further, Northwestern and West Point, the chief contenders against Notre Dame this season, are going to be subjected to both over-confidence and over-anxiousness. By game time they are going to be convinced that this is their big chance, which must not be missed. They are going to plunge in to wipe up the Irish for the first time.

Chances About 50-50 And then, knowing what the enemy is thinking, that swift, certain, machine-like attack—so sure, so relentless—may come along from Notre Dame just as it did many times under "Rock," sweeping the enemy before it just as victory was in its grasp.

Notre Dame's chances seem at least 50-50, will merely score another good, old-fashioned crushing down in the good, old-fashioned Rockne way.

In passing it is rather striking that Rockne, even in death, will again dominate American football. For years the eyes of the nation on those crisp fall afternoons have turned to the Notre Dame game and the name of Rockne has been on millions of lips.

In the past the question has been: "Can Rockne do it again today, can he win?" This fall the question will be: "Can they win? Can they win without Rockne?"

READER DOUBTS QUALITY OF LOW PRICED FUNERAL

States Belief that Certain Features Are Eliminated

By ROY L. FAIRBANKS Fairbanks Home for Funerals

The writer of this column recently received a letter from a resident of Muscatine, which raises an interesting question. In the belief that the correspondent's doubts are shared by others, it might be well to reprint here a portion of this letter.

"I have been deeply interested in your series of newspaper articles," he says, "and must admit that they have given me a totally new idea of modern burial methods. I am, for example, glad to know that my family can make use of your establishment for as little as may be available at the time."

Completeness "But I can't quite convince myself that you are able to provide a low-priced funeral service, and still make it as complete as most people would wish on this sacred occasion. . . . When you mark your prices plainly, I know very well that you can't lose money on one service and then make it up on another. I have a suspicion that some of the old-timers used to do this, but it's evident that with your policy you couldn't even try such tactics. How do you explain this?"

How It Is Done The explanation is a very simple one, and the writer is grateful for an opportunity to make this point clear. When a family comes here for our services they must understand that no effort is made to pry into their affairs. We have made it so easy to select a fitting service with in the means of every purse that there is no need for us to force our own opinions. Therefore the choice is made freely and comfortably.

Now then, every price marked in our establishment is for the complete funeral service, with every single detail that the most discriminating family would wish. The reason

DARE INTERPRETS the MODE

The way to attain the new silhouette is pleasant, if you know the right secret—Promises Dah-ray.

AND now what's the velvet up to? It has been predicted the velvet frocks will be all-important this Autumn—and they are! Because of the gracious charm of these velvet frocks, fashion-wise women began to look around for other uses for velvet—and found them! And their latest discovery is velvet bags for afternoon.

These velvet bags are made, generally, in envelope style, with silver or gold monograms, and lined with exquisite printed satins. Some of these velvet bags, yielding to the temptation of adding softness of line to beauty of fabric, have puffed ends or puffed or shirred insets and incrustations. Black and brown velvet are most popular for afternoon bags—I saw a stunning one of manila brown velvet with a monogram worked in tiny, copper-tinted beads—and a black and white evening gown at one of the recent Paris collections was accompanied by a white velvet bag with a silver and onyx.

Though these bags are very lovely and quite in keeping with the times, be careful not to overload them! You know how velvet is a simple matter to steam it over a tea kettle and brush the nap back into place with a very soft brush while you're steaming it.

SPORTS coats, my dears, have become something to think about in these cool and colorful days! There are sports coats to wear actively, and "dress-sports-coats" for spectators. And these coats are works of brilliant art! I have sketched one of them today from the Maison Heim. This is of

CHAPTER XXIV Midnight Confidences

IT was noon on the Sunday following the ice carnival before any one stirred at the lodge. They were leaving for New York at 4 in the afternoon, and every one was experiencing the lull of feeling that comes after a week of merry-making. About 1 o'clock they gathered around the fireplace in the living-room for a combination lunch and breakfast. They were all in traveling clothes and seemed oddly out of place—the Chateaus cried aloud for skating togs and snowshoes and woolly caps.

"I feel New Yorkish already," Kay complained, yawning. "You ought to enjoy the feeling," Adele remarked, "considering that your heart is in the sidewalks of New York and Boston."

Kay flushed and Phyllis opened her eyes very widely. Adele was reminding her to type fast; this was the first crazy thing she had said since coming to camp. It seemed to Phyllis that Mrs. Wolfe, who was listening, smiled to herself, but she could not be sure. Later she was to learn that Kay's mother had had a long talk with Granby before leaving New York and had nearly got him to promise not to see Kay again. He had promised not to write to Kay during the house party and it was over this shabby victory that Mrs. Wolfe was smiling now.

They lounged about until time to leave for the train, their departure from Chateau Louise sober and silent, compared with their jolly arrival. Once aboard the train they settled down to bridge until dinner time, playing in a kind of dull earnestness that made Phyllis impatient with them all.

After dinner they all agreed to go to their berths early. The girls repaired to the dressing room and yawned over their bedtime preparations, and the men gathered in the smoking car for a round of pinochle. Phyllis had barely spoken to John Gage since the events of the evening before. She was both thrilled and indignant when she remembered his conduct. Almost he had made love to her; and then had checked the unmistakable note of passion in his voice so abruptly that she could not understand it. Unless—unless she hated to accept the alternative, but there it was, unless he was actually promised to Adele.

Phyllis smarted under this realization even as she reminded herself that she would not have been free to listen to him if he had told her that he loved her. It was not for her to draw back, to place a seal on his lips—it was another thing for him to be the one to hesitate. Of course, he believed her to be Marjorie Pentland, so her mistake could have had nothing to do with his hesitancy. There was still the unsolved matter of his having told her he had not been in California for years when she knew she had traveled East on the same train with him—she felt asleep, sore and resentful over all these things and awoke late in the night, aware that some one was talking outside her berth.

For a moment, she thought she was dreaming, then she recognized Adele's voice. She half raised herself on one elbow and looked cautiously out from between the curtains of her berth. Adele, in pajamas and dressing gown was standing in the aisle, talking to Count Slavlin, who was still fully dressed.

"And you lost fifty berries?" Adele asked.

"And a few cents over—but we will disturb people if we stand here talking, Miss Adele."

Adele shrugged. "Oh, they're too asleep to care. I'll sleep at all, that's why I sneaked out to the club car for a smoke."

"And found me there, dreaming," Adele added, "didn't sleep, besides I like to watch the night slip by from a train window."

"Day dreaming is better than dreaming while asleep," Adele thought. Adele went on conversationally, "In day dreams you can summon the things you want to dream about at will, but you can't always choose the subjects of your sleeping dreams."

"Very true—an interesting topic, dreams."

"Yes—I'll bet you a fiver I could guess the object of yours, Teddy."

"Women love betting on a sure thing," was the Count's comment. There was a little silence then, and Phyllis drowsed a bit, wondering at Adele's staring in standing there in the middle of a Pullman aisle holding a conversation with the Count. It probably wasn't right to listen, but then she couldn't help herself, and there was certainly so far nothing at all about their conversation to make it wrong for her to listen.

So you think Marjorie's a sure thing, do you? Adele's voice had taken on an edge and Phyllis waked up sharply again.

"No woman is ever a sure thing—that is part of their fascination—their eternal fascination," Slavlin countered smoothly, "and now—since the object of my dreams is so transparent to you, I think I'll go along to my own car and turn in. The men may wonder what I'm keeping me, if they are still awake."

"Oh, don't worry about my reputation," Adele laughed unpleasantly. "I'll do my own good night, and Phyllis smiled to herself at the thought of the stiff little bow he probably made as he brushed past Adele.

Adele, however, must have detained him by catching his arm. "Wait," she commanded in a low tone. "This is something you ought to know—something that concerns my own affairs, too—let me tell you about it."

"I really must go."

"No—stop a moment—I can easily raise my voice and awaken some one—then where will you be with Marjorie? She's a little pride, you know—she'd be shocked at my standing here like this talking to you."

"Be quick, then," his voice was a half whisper now, and Phyllis, intensely interested, listened shamelessly for Adele's next words.

"Mystery!" Adele, however, was in no hurry. Phyllis judged from her movement that she leaned back against her berth, which was directly across the aisle from hers, Phyllis, and took her time about answering the question.

"You know that John Gage and I are seriously interested in each other," she began.

"Yes—that has been apparent."

"And you are really very glad of it, for you've probably noticed, too, that your Marjorie isn't exactly cold to John Gage's attentions, such as he has shown her."

"Really, Miss Adele—"

"Wait, I'm coming to the important part—there's some mystery about Marjorie Pentland—I'm sure of it. I have been suspicious ever since I met her in New York—she is altogether changed from the girl I met at her grandfather's ranch in California, but I can't quite put my finger on the change."

"I don't see how—"

"You will see in a minute—I took a long hike with John Gage two days ago and we stopped to rest for a while and I borrowed a handkerchief from him. When he pulled it from his pocket a letter came with it—and I saw the address on the envelope. It was addressed in his own handwriting to 'Miss Marjorie Pentland'—and the address was 'to come place in Pennsylvania—I couldn't see just where for he put the letter away very quickly. But I did see her name and the name of the State—what can you make of that?'"

"Nothing at all—it isn't my affair, and I hardly see, if you will pardon my saying so, that it is your affair, Miss Rogers. Now if you have finished I will say good night."

Phyllis could picture Adele's chagrin, and she felt also a warm sense of gratitude to the Count for refusing to enlarge upon the story Adele had told. For a long time after she heard the other girl climb back into bed she lay awake, pondering this happening, trying to fit it into the puzzle of her present position, at tempting to fathom the outcome of her pretense.

Wax It, the Very Latest Thing For Milady's Hair

By ALICE LANGELIER

PARIS—(INS) — Wax it! is the newest hair slogan now being given out by fashionable French coiffeurs who warn women that they must wear their lovely locks in order to maintain what will appear like a fantastic head of feathers, just as men once waxed their proud and perky mustaches.

One of the newest coiffures seen at a fashionable coiffeur's in the Champs Elysees shows rows of little upright curls across the top of the head very much like a cock's comb and dressed with wax to preserve their shape. Another shows small round separate ringlets concentrated on the back of the neck and still another has the hair in clusters over the ears.

This wax dressing is put on rather heavy and makes it possible to do almost anything and everything with unruly locks. Better still, it detracts in no manner from the color or gloss.

Long hair, by the way, really seems doomed to perish for the biggest French coiffeurs are urging women to bob again and very few long locks are in evidence. They are discouraging the very curls and bob, advocating only curls at the sides with a shingle back.

Antoine is making new evening wigs of thin youthful looking curls.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—I suppose that I will never again get such a thrill as I had Saturday afternoon when I was presented with the championship cup of the Professional Golfers' Association. I had hopes of doing well at Wanamaker, for I had been hitting my shots much better this year and had many low scores over my home course — and naturally I wanted the Albany country club members to be proud of me. I was — I was — I thought I knew that 69's and 70's at home have nothing to do with 79's and 80's on a strange lay-out, particularly when there's a major title at stake. I am taking home the P. G. A. trophy with me, but some place in the vicinity of Rhode Is-and I've lost three points. I'm going to begin today to find them. They are precious when you need them!

As long as I live I will never forget the scare Denny Shute gave me when he won three holes after I was four up with six to play. I was panicky for a moment but once I realized that I was still in the lead, I was still four feet away on his approach. When he missed it he conceded the hole and the match to Creavy, who had fifteen feet from the pin on his pitch and rimmed the cup for a sure 5.

The officials and police had a terrible time controlling the crowd who wanted to rush out to shake hands with the winner.

I heard George Von Elm and Billy Burke and Gene Sarazen rave about the "kid" after he beat Gene on Friday, and I thoroughly agree with their estimate of his hit ball as Creavy does is going to win many a title in the next five years. He was all too dizzy with his chip shots and too proud, greedy and too much of a mauler to have had I most sincerely congratulate him. What a golfer!

There was a time in the last six weeks when I had faint idea that I might be able to pull through. But you can't keep a good man down, and that chip shot at the seventh hole was the last straw. I said to myself, I want to go. I take

THREE JOBS READY TO SPEED $1,000,000 IN 1932

YANKEES, CUBS AND GIANTS TO SEEK PENNANTS

Sunday Baseball Lack In Quaker City May Cause Changes

Baseball fans of Philadelphia may soon be suffering from the after-effects of last winter's legislation. For last winter's legislature failed to pass a Sunday baseball law and as a result it is feared that not even the Athletics can afford to longer hold onto some of the game's greatest stars.

And in the case of the Phillies it appears a foregone conclusion that Chuck Klein will pass on to a wealthier club in the National league.

The Cubs and Giants of the National league, and the Yankees of the American, are pennant hungry for a million dollars is available to the owners of the big league clubs in Philadelphia if they will part with the contracts of some of their biggest stars.

Klein to Cubs

The Cubs are believed to have the inside track already in the purchase of Chuck Klein. A sum of money sufficient to lessen the unemployment situation in a fair sized city will be passed on to the Phillies, it is believed. And in addition Hack Wilson may be thrown in for good measure.

The Phils can't pay Chuck a salary in keeping with his deeds, and besides the offers of the Cubs and Giants are very alluring.

No doubt the amount of cash available for Klein's purchase is huge—enough to provide a fine year's dividend. Then, too, the owners of the Phils will be gambling with the chance that Hack Wilson may stage a big comeback next year. And if Hack could stage a complete comeback the fans of Philadelphia wouldn't even miss Klein.

Salary Vice Versa

Right now, however, Klein is being paid about one third of what Wilson is being paid. And on performance it should be just the other way around.

Had Hack earned his $35,000 this year the Cubs might be out in front instead of the Cards.

Add Klein to either the Cubs or the Giants and they would be in a fine position to win next year.

Klein's departure from Philadelphia seems almost certain. But in the case of the A's Connie Mack has them guessing.

The writer's right along contended that Mack would not tear down, but would build even more securely with added talent. However, the writer's opinion in this case seems to be a minority opinion.

Big league baseball men in great numbers believe that Mack will dispose of a few of his stars.

Stars May Go

If this is done it will be done some time after the year world series games are history. And if it is done one is not likely to miss seeing it in print for it will be big news and commanding a big head.

If Mack does some dismantling who will go? His greatest stars are Simmons, Cochrane, Grove and Earnshaw. The season of 1931 hasn't been a Jimmy Foxx year, but Jimmy is quite a valuable piece of property just the same.

Those are the five men who would command the biggest part of a million dollars.

Next to them Haas, perhaps, would be in demand. Then Walberg.

There would be no exciting bidding for the rest of the veterans. Dykes, Boley, Bishop and Miller are stars but are getting along in years and have been a bit brittle this season.

Youngsters Only Average

And the youngsters of the A's do not stand out above the youngsters of other big league clubs.

If Mack tears down he must replace the parts with new ball players and he hasn't been doing any great amount of buying. That one point does not lend strength to the assumption that he will sell his big men.

He might sell Bishop and Boley and use Williams and McNair in their place. He might sell Dykes and put Foxx on third and then buy Art Shires for first and confirm that rumor.

If he sold Grove and Earnshaw and depended on his remaining pitchers with what he might pick up over the winter he'd have perhaps the weakest pitching staff in the league.

But maybe he wouldn't worry about the future if he decides to sell. Maybe he would step down and let some one else rebuild. That probably would be the best thing to do in such circumstances. If he sells out now he probably won't last long enough to see another great club built up and patronage restored. For the fans certainly will quit his club if it is stripped of its stars. It is not their fault that Sunday baseball is illegal in Pennsylvania.

'LEFTY' GROVE COPS 30TH WIN

Athletic Star Only American Leaguer To Turn Trick

By COPELAND C. BURG (INS Sports Writer)

NEW YORK — Poor "Lefty" Grove!

We felt sorry for the crack American league hurler Friday. He has just gone out and covered himself with some more glory and we presume now if he does not shut out the St. Louis Cards at least twice in the coming world series, some one will complain to Commissioner Landis about it.

"Lefty" blew up his reputation to the saturation point in pitching the Athletics to a 3 to 1 victory over the Chicago White Sox, the win making him the first in his league to have 30 successes in a season. He is the only major league moundman to hit the 30 mark in the last eleven years.

Ruth Gets 43rd

Mr. Ruth hit homer No. 43 as the New York Yankees ran the St. Louis Browns through an orange juice crusher, 14 to 4. He is now only one of two great clouts behind the leader, Lou Gehrig.

Washington remained in a tie for second place with the Yanks by turning back Detroit, 4 to 3, in 12 innings. Marberry mastered White-hill, Detroit hurler.

Wilbert Robinson, that grand old man of baseball, is going to get credit for another hurling sensation by beating Van Mungo, lead the Chicago Cubs to eight hits and grappled a 3 to 2 advantage for Brooklyn.

Cards Beat Giants

Orsatti scored the run that won 4 to 3, for St. Louis over the New York Giants, when Roettger hit a long fly in the ninth.

Russell and Lisencbee were too good for Cleveland, hurling the Ruddy Sox of Boston to 6-1 and 6-4 triumphs.

Brandt was puzzling to the Pirates as a Long Island murder mystery and Boston collected 6 to 2. In the evening bill, Maine spaced the Braves' clouts and the Pirates captured it, 4 to 1. Scores by innings:

Basketball Hopes At Tipton Junior College Are High

TIPTON, Ia.—(Special)—Chances of a successful junior college basketball season here for the coming year are high. Every member of last year's team has enrolled in school and will be back in uniform. The team will be strengthened somewhat by the addition of several of last year's high school performers who have enrolled at the local college. Coach John M. Lang announced that the college scheduled has not yet been completed but the first contest will be at Wartburg college of Clinton on Dec. 5 and the second with Maquoketa on Dec. 11.

High school basketball prospects are not considered so good this year although it cannot be said definitely just what kind of a team will be had until practice begins after the football season. Following is the high school basketball schedule:

Dec. 8, Stanwood here.

Dec. 11, Bennett there.

Dec. 15, Mechanicville there.

Dec. 18, West Branch here.

Jan. 1, Mount Vernon there.

Jan. 8, University High (Iowa City) here.

Jan. 29, West Liberty there.

Feb. 1, Bennett here.

Feb. 5, West Branch there.

Feb. 12, DeWitt here.

Feb. 19 and 29, county tournament.

JONES BEGINS SEVENTH YEAR WITH TROJANS

Former Iowa Mentor Active Coach for Twenty Years

LOS ANGELES.—(INS)—Howard H. Jones, head football coach at the University of Southern California, has begun his seventh year as gridiron mentor at Troy and his twentieth year as an active coach.

Jones started his coaching career at Syracuse in 1908 and has been in charge of football at Yale, Ohio State, Iowa, Duke and Southern California. He is at Southern California under a five-year contract signed at the close of the '28 season with the University's Board of Trustees.

Since his coming to the University of Southern California in 1925, Jones' Trojan teams have won a total of 54 games, have lost only 9 and tied 2 for grand six-year average of 83.1 per cent.

During this period, Southern California has not finished lower of Truities. The agreement will carry him through the season of 1931-32. In 1926 and last year, Trojan eleven placed second, in 1927 and 1929, tied for first, and in 1928, the S. C. team won the undisputed championship of the Pacific Coast Conference and was awarded of the Rissman trophy emblematic of the football title of the country.

TOUCHDOWN SECRETS Reverse Play Fools Opponents

By SOL METZGER

Knut Rockne often used a reverse play with back (4) receiving the ball from center, spinning to his right as if to follow backs (2 and 3) on a run to the left. So this forward pass play starts. But this time 4 does not follow 2 and 3. Instead, he fakes handing the ball to 3, and then runs to the rear. These moves by backs (2 and 3) are inclined to pull the rear defensive right half to his right to stop what he believes to be an end run in that direction. Meantime, the two ends (5 and 7) have broken down field as shown in the diagram, as the No. 1 back, after checking the charge of the defensive right tackle, swings down field to the left. Thus, the area is cleared for 7 to break into open territory where he gets a pass from 4. Again, lineman (6) protects the passer on one side while backs (2 and 3) doing the same thing on the other side of the formation.

It was plays of this type that made Notre Dame's great Monday we'll go South to see what Georgia Tech has to offer in its present campaign to regain lost football prestige.

"JOE JINKS"

DYNAMITE WON HIS BATTLE TO MAKE JOE STICK AS HIS MANAGER AND THE NEXT THING ON THE PROGRAM IS TO MAP OUT A BIG CAMPAIGN OF ACTION LEADING TO A FIGHT WITH SCHMELING!

Gridiron Writer Picks Purdue To Win Big Ten Championship

Carideo Assistant to Coach Noble Kizer This Season

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth of a series by Leo Fischer from the Big Ten training camps. Follow him through the conference for the latest and best "dope" on the teams. Indiana will be next.

By LEO FISCHER

LAFAYETTE, Ind.—It looks as if Frank Carideo may have to go another year without knowing defeat.

Frank has switched from an all-American player at Notre Dame to an assistant coach at Purdue, and it seems his new affiliation will continue right on from where he left off after two undefeated seasons with the Irish.

Purdue, which lost unexpected one-point verdicts to Michigan and Indiana last year, is a smarter team than it was in 1930. Replacing such star forwards as Van Bibber, Butner, Christman, and Stears would puzzle any coach, but Noble Kizer, starting his second year as coach has plenty of replacements.

There's only one cloud on the Bollermaker horizon, the game with Illinois on Oct. 10. If the team can get by that date without slipping, it should be a joy-ride for the rest of the season.

Last year Michigan was the opening hurdle for the Old Gold, and that heart-breaking defeat not only kept Purdue from a second title, but gave Michigan the break it needed to sit for the championship.

This season Purdue isn't taking anybody as lightly as it regarded Michigan last year. The Bollermakers are working hard to start winning right from the opening kickoff.

A big tough line and two interchangeable sets of brilliant backs are responsible for all the high hopes around here. The veteran Purdue backfield is made up of four seniors who have played in 16 consecutive games without being outscored on touchdowns. Purdue has lost two contests in its two previous years, but both on missed points after touchdowns.

Risk Heads Foursome

Ed Risk, leading ground-gainer in the Big Ten last fall, heads the senior foursome. He averaged nearly 6-2 yards every time he carried the ball last year. Purvis, another sturdy ball carrier and fine defensive player, is a capable running mate.

Jack White, an exceptionally good quarterback, will again direct the play, with Alex Yunevich attending to the line plunging activities.

The younger backfield consists of three sophomores and one junior. Ray Horstmann, whose ground-gaining record also averaged better than six yards an effort last year. Horstmann would probably replace Yunevich on the "veteran" quartet, except that coach Kizer is trying to familiarize him in working with the other three.

Fred Hecker of Houston, Texas, is the ace halfback on the youngsters' foursome. He is pegged around here as another "pest" Welch, who also was a Texas. He is a real triple threat, and weighs 165 pounds.

RENO, Nev.—(INS)—Jack Dempsey will go through with his plans for a Nevada divorce here Monday.

"No matter what Estelle says, I came here with and still have the intention of making Nevada my permanent home.

"My business interests are here and despite her statement I do not live in California any longer.

"I expect to proceed with my divorce action here in spite of any move by the other side. That is their business and I know nothing about it.

CHAPMAN AFTER RICE MARK OF STOLEN BASES

Yank Star May Equal Rice's Record But Not Ty Cobb's

By FRANK (BUCK) O'NEILL

INS Special Sports Writer

NEW YORK — Joe McCarthy stood on the coaching lines in St. Petersburg this Spring watching Ben Chapman at second base stagger through a ragged fielding drill. The boy did everything wrong, and Marse Joe walked to the bench shaking his head.

"He isn't a second baseman," said Marse Joe to Sunset Buzze. "He doesn't seem to have the knack but he carries a batting punch, and we can use that without any trouble. We will need all the punch we can muster."

Sunset Burke maintained a dignified silence. So did Fletcher.

Fast But Unpolished

"He's as fast as a streak, and he might make an outfielder. But we will have to wait until he gets into condition," continued McCarthy.

And so Chapman went to second base until that unhappy day in Washington when Dusty Cooke was injured. That gave Chapman his big opportunity. The kid was sent to the outfield.

So it was that after frowning on the sandy haired rookie, McCarthy broadly on Chapman. A hit under the belt on balls hit over his head, Chapman addressed himself to the task of learning to turn his back to the diamond while running toward the fences. He learned quickly. He stole a base one day and came back to the bench after scoring with a broad grin on his face.

Prosemy Comes True

"I love to steal bases. I think I'll get at least 50 this year," he said to McCarthy.

"Get them, boy. No one has done it in this league since 1922, when Sisler did it," was McCarthy's answer.

"I can do it," snapped Chapman. Chapman already has passed the fifty mark. Two years previous to Sisler, Sam Rice of the Senators stole 62 bases. Chapman may readily tie Rice's mark, but Ty Cobb holds the modern American League mark with 96 stolen bases.

Iowa Legislature Should Follow Lead Of Ohio Solons and License N. Baker

EDITOR'S NOTE:

Reprinted herewith is the story of "Bonsetter" Reese, a former roller of steel whom Providence had endowed with a remarkable gift for healing. Because of the remarkable cures effected by this man, the "regular" doctors attempted to prevent him from practicing his healing art.

It so happened, however, that there were fair minded men in those days who were able to understand that all knowledge was not the exclusive possession of allopathic physicians. In 1891, just forty years ago, the legislature of the state of Ohio legalized his practice by conferring on him a license.

There are two lessons to be learned in this incident. First, the persecution of all exponents of healing not in accordance with the narrow views of "regular" physicians may always be expected. Second, there is a way to permit humanity to benefit by the researches and studies of laymen even though the "regulars" control the state board of health.

WASHINGTON, D. C. (Special)—Dr. John O. "Bonsetter" Reese, whose skillful fingers have ministered to the aches and pains of the Washington ball team, local college athletes and the afflicted throughout the country, has returned.

Seventy-six years old, he has withdrawn to the seclusion of his home in Youngstown, Ohio, leaving his healing work to younger hands. The man who labored in the steel mills until 1894, when he realized he had a peculiar gift for relieving the suffering of others, has weakened rapidly during the past few months following a protracted illness.

Ignored Own Health
Having ignored his own health while treating others, Dr. Reese today leaves his home only for a daily drive or for a visit with a friend. He goes into retirement, however, he takes with him the homage of his former patients—now his friends and admirers. These include such men as Nick Atrock, Al Schacht, Ty Cobb, Johnny Kilbane, "Battling" Nelson, Fred Stone, Gene Tunney and Lloyd George.

A correspondent in Youngstown writes to The Star that "Bonsetter" Reese was reported to be a millionaire and in his retirement lives as simply as when he came to Youngstown in 1897 to work as a steel roller. On his arrival there he was endowed with the gift of bonsetting which later made him nationally famous, although his healing genius remained undiscovered for several years.

The "gift" of bonsetting Dr. Reese recalls, he has possessed ever since he was a boy in his native Wales. He roamed the hills of Wales with an old "bonsetter" and naturalist at the age of 11. When the bonsetter to whom he had attached himself was summoned by farmers or villagers to set a leg, straighten a collar bone, or mend a limping foot, the young student avidly observed every manipulation of the healer. Like an intense child, young Reese looked on while his older companion "bonsetted" at times assisting at times asking questions, sometimes substituting for his teacher, and always learning.

Accident Starts Career
In 1899 while working in the mill the "Bonsetter" launched his career quite by accident. A fellow employee suffered a leg fracture. It was a compound fracture and the worker was in great pain. Working nearby, Reese heard the groans. To

In Muscatine is a man who has done something that deserves recognition, more recognition in fact, than that accorded "Bonsetter" Reese. Norman Baker, because he has been able to give the matter publicity, has succeeded in letting the world know that cancer is being cured at the Baker Hospital. Instead of offering him recognition, the state prosecuted him.

The scourge of cancer is infinitely worse than any fracture of bones. Wouldn't it be a splendid gesture, if the state legislature of Iowa would investigate the work done at the Baker Hospital and investigate it from the standpoint of ascertaining the truth rather than in a vain endeavor to pick flaws? As the result of that investigation, if the state is convinced that cancer is being cured at the Baker Hospital, why shouldn't the legislature of Iowa confer on Norman Baker the honor of a license to practice medicine?

When Reese came home from work he found crowds waiting for him. Until late at night he worked, dismissing patients convinced they had forever parted with their pains, disorders and deformities.

Practice Legalized
In 1891 members of the medical profession in Youngstown, doubtful of the bonsetter's cures, sought to prohibit him from practicing. A counter protest from patients, friends and cured cripples caused the Ohio State Legislature to pass a bill conferring upon "Dr." Reese the right and authority to practice the "profession of bonsetting" and to charge fees. Dr. Reese is the only one vested with this privilege.

In 1894 demands on his time grew so great the healer was compelled to leave his job at the mills and to devote all his time to "bonsetting."

An instance of Dr. Reese's amazing powers is reported in the case of the daughter of one of America's leading automobile manufacturers, who sought relief from a painful injury suffered several years before and declared incurable.

She came to Reese in a special train, was wheeled from the train to the home of Dr. Reese. That evening she attended a dance at the home of one of Youngstown's steel manufacturers, dancing for the first time since she had been injured. Whether that story is true or not, it illustrates the type of reputation as a worker of "miracles" that "Bonsetter Reese" enjoys.

Kept Practice Secret
Modest, reticent, firm in his refusal to be publicized or to reveal the names of patients, and "Bonsetter" Reese has consistently denied interviews to newspapers and magazine writers, even refusing to pose for photographs.

Only through reports of his patients and his friends have his cures become public. In 1927, when Dr. Reese was returning from Honolulu the captain of his ship asked whether he could anything for his limping leg. Reese heard the groans. To

Michigan Man Says Cancer Cured at Baker Hospital

Disregards Items of Journal and Takes Treatment Here

Life is happier today for Charles E. Hines. The Muscatine Journal for the past two months has tried in vain to discredit the work of the committee of the TNT magazine, and Norman Baker regarding their research work and investigations which brought forth the greatest Goodness ever discovered for humanity—a cure for cancer.

Clyde Rabedaux, publisher of Muscatine's second paper, "who is now about 2,500 circulation below this paper, has published every kind of article against Norman Baker, K-TNT and the Baker hospital for no other purpose than to harm Mr. Baker; to destroy what he terms a competitor, and in this he has the sanction of Mr. Alder, who controls the other Muscatine paper together with the Davenport Democrat, Times, also Ottumwa Courier and Kewanee paper.

Many False Statements
In their attempt to create the wrong impression and turn public support from the Baker Hospital and the cures being effected there, for cancer, hemorrhoids and most all other ailments without operations, radium or X-ray.

With them Dr. Beveridge, Dr. Howe, Dr. Folson and others who signed the first full page advertisement in an attack upon Mr. Baker through a spirit of jealousy, perhaps actuated by the fact that Mr. Baker, a layman, broadcasted that he possessed formulas that cured cancer, while the entire organized medical group admit they cannot after 100 years of medical research.

These false statements they have published has cost the lives of many men and women, many no doubt which may have been their own subscribers.

Cancer Kills Mother
Picture for instance Mr. Hines, whose letter we publish below, or picture a mother of four little kiddies, suffering from cancer. There she lies upon the bed, dying inch by inch.

The doctor has given her up as incurable. She has read in the end with those four little kiddies praying each night at mother's bedside for the health of their loving mother. Of those little kiddies, of tender years, who are in a mother's care—left to become charity upon the county, because their father died of cancer a few years before.

Right in her county exists the Baker hospital, where that cancer could be cured—where worse cases than hers have been cured. She will not go there. She has read in the Advertiser, the Cedar Rapids Gazette and Des Moines Tribune, false news items of quackery and is led to believe that the place is a fake. That cancer is not curable, and that perhaps a subscriber for years to the "second" Muscatine paper which Clyde permits the columns to be used in satisfying his personal revenge by one dropping out on account of its unfairness and dishonesty. It is only natural. Eventually they will see the light of day—it is dawning.

other side of the story as this paper tells it, and hundreds are there who have gone to the operating table to be butchered when every doctor knows that Dr. Mayo stated that 99 operations for cancer out of a hundred fail and the dreaded disease returns. They won't tell their friends or patients that—indeed not—they want the almighty dollar—they get it by deceit—that misrepresentation and deception.

Hines Is Different
On the other side of the picture is a man like Charles Hines of 308 Emmons Boulevard, Wyandotte, Mich., who heard from a distance the stories about quackery. He no doubt feels that those called quacks are the ones to go to for health because they are only called quacks because they refuse to do what the allopaths cannot do, jealously thus being the reason. He had cancer of the left breast. He went to Henry Ford hospital, they pronounced it cancer—they would not operate—mind you Dr. Mayo said 99 operations for cancer out of each 100 causes a recurrence.

But what care they, the dollar is their god, and they are willing they are to try and discredit the Baker hospital where cancer is cured without operations and a guarantee to treat it free if it ever returns in the same place where formerly cured.

Hines did not care to go through an operation. He has read other articles in health magazines and the Free Press which are not controlled by the Medical Trust or influenced like the Muscatine Journal, Davenport papers, or the Argus of Rock Island. He came to Muscatine, and his letter printed word for word below, tells the story.

"Muscatine, Iowa, September 16, 1931.

"Baker Hospital, Muscatine, Iowa. Gentlemen: Before returning to my home I want to leave my letter expressing my happiness and appreciation to you for the wonderful results I have received from my treatments at your hospital.

"My affliction was cancer of the left breast and fortunately I had received no treatments of any kind before coming to the Baker Hospital. I had had a thorough examination at the Henry Ford Hospital at Detroit and they wanted to use surgery; also I consulted a cancer specialist and he said I was incurable. Knowing that neither of these were ever known to cure cancer and having heard that the Baker Hospital was curing cancer, I immediately came to Muscatine and have just been under your treatment forty-four days.

"I certainly will praise the Baker Hospital to the very highest for the wonderful work they are doing and will urge all cancer sufferers to not hesitate one minute in going there for treatment.

"Yours truly, Charles E. Hines, 308 Emmons Boulevard, Wyandotte, Mich."

While the Advertiser, Journal, Democrat and Times strive to keep their suffering subscribers away from a real cure in order to satisfy their own personal grievances, their subscribers on the other hand are by one dropping out on account of its unfairness and dishonesty. It is only natural. Eventually they will see the light of day—it is dawning.

Legion and Corps Members Off for Detroit Saturday

During the past week the local American Legion drum and bugle corps has been having strenuous drills and rehearsals in preparation for their forthcoming appearance at the national convention in Detroit.

The corps left Muscatine at midnight Saturday, traveling by automobiles. During the stay in Detroit the Muscatine legionnaires will have their quarters and headquarters at the LaFrance Apartments, 3447 Woodward avenue.

The state of Iowa will be represented by seven drum corps and the local corps will play a big part in the state's convention. The musical ability of the corps is well above the average and they will go to the convention with a repertoire such as no other corps now has. Great credit is due to Harry C. Thompson, the instructor, for the efficient manner in which he has prepared the corps and for the high quality of music that the corps has. Many of the pieces played by the Muscatine outfit are Mr. Thompson's own compositions and were written especially for this drum corps.

It is hardly necessary to mention

Detroit Quarters For Corps Secured

Sam Dye and Warren Davis preceded the rest of the Legion corps to Detroit by several days. It was their duty to arrange for sleeping accommodation for the outfit.

All indications point to an exceedingly large Legion parade this year and it is estimated that more than two million people will be on the sidelines viewing the spectacle.

the fact that H. Jennings, who, as drum major, is responsible for the fine appearance of the corps during drills and parades, is entitled to credit, for every one not only in the state of "I-O-W-A" but all over the U. S. know him and they all know that when "H. J." takes an outfit over well that outfit is "made." The local boys are proud of "H. J." shown by the fact that one of the most popular numbers has been dedicated to him.

The following are attending the convention: Peterson, Tierney, Biles, Broughton, Schurmer, Starck, Titus, Rasmussen, Heard, B. Thompson, Biery, Shoemaker, Butler, T. Davis, Quandt, Applegate, McBride, Barnard, Haight, Holmes, Bloom, Herwig, Froehner, Maxon, Wiltmer, Christopherson, Kopie, Hunler, Harry Thompson, instructor, and H. Jennings, drum major.

Spanish-American War Veterans in Reunion This Week

While the American Legion convention is in session at Detroit there will be a reunion of Spanish-American War Veterans in Muscatine and the members of the Legion drum corps are sorry that the dates of the two meetings conflict for they would have liked to join in the welcome to their comrades of an earlier war. All are ex-service men, regardless of which war, and as such pretty well understand each other. Being that we cannot be with you in Muscatine, accept this as a salute to and a hearty welcome from the Legion drum corps at Detroit.

New Corps Drills To Commence Soon

Part of the new equipment for the drum and bugle corps has been received by the Veterans of Foreign Wars and it is expected to be able to commence drills and practice in the near future.

How You Can Make Dah-Ray's Wonder-Youth Corset

TURN corsetiere, and make yourself a corset that would cost you forty to sixty dollars, and in Paris at "hat"—so you can add the duty to this price and see how much you are going to save the family budget with the help of this leaflet!

It all happened when my last sixty dollar Paris corset wore out, and I was so far from home and so short of sixty "dollars" that I decided to try a hand at corset-making. I cut out a piece of "slipper satin" in the front. Sew it down on the machine, with strong thread and two rows of the stitching. Then cut the hem of one edge of the affair as indicated by the dotted lines. Next see Fig. 2, which is the back, and cut this as indicated at the dotted lines, too. Now, Fig. 3, and cut a dart as shown as indicated, after you have tried the garment on. It is a BASTED, not planned, the darts to your figure.

Well, it is when you cut the elastic that the fun begins. So, with matching satin ribbon, sew your darts down as you see on Fig. 4, on the machine, with a strip of ribbon on both the right and left sides. Double rows of stitching.

Now, this is the only difficult part of this garment—the binding. This is best done at the top and at the bottom of the corset with a fine crochet hook and heavy thread, of course—but what a job to catch every single thread of the elastic so that it will not unravel up like one's silk stockings do! So I rather think you won't want to, but instead will have to bind with half or even quarter inch wide elastic. This is tricky, and someone will have to help you. For, looking at Fig. 5, you will have to sew a row of elastic along the right side of the corset, on the machine, and sewing it with a coarse needle and strong linen or cotton thread, will have to STRETCH the elastic of the garment and the elastic of the binding out as far as it will go AS you sew it. You can turn this elastic right side would binding, but that is not as nice a finish as to just sew it down flat once and to the right side.

Now surely you know that you only have to bind this garment where the elastic is CUT, and really, the I have sketched the binding on Fig. 5, you shouldn't bind it until you have attached the brassiere. This brassiere, attached to the corset, and with its elastic shoulder straps, and its form fitting and a supporting shape, is the most important part of this garment. You can see how to crochet it on Fig. 6, and how to crochet it right TO the top of your corset, or just sew it there with a needle and thread and over and over, either of course your brassiere has to be fitted perfectly to your figure before you attach it to the corset. And, should you wish the leading edge of the elastic to be a little wider, you can exactly how to crochet this brassiere, you need only send for it and it will be sent right away.

Now, it is the time to attach the brassiere to the corset, and the fact that brassiere and corset are all one piece, that does away with that fat roll at the waist, pushed up around your waist. Also, this corset does not confine you uncomfortably, but restrains your NATURAL curves, as it were.

Fig. 7 shows how your elastic shoulder straps go in the back, and note that the back decollete of this corset is low enough to permit of it being worn with evening gown? Fig. 8 is the finished back, and Fig. 9 is the finished front.

Now, if you wish to, you can open the garment down about six inches at one side, and sewing metal eyelets that you can buy on a strip of cloth, down to each side of the opening, lace this. I have mine that way, even if it is lots of trouble, but it is a real thing, because my hips are larger than the stretch of the upper part of the garment allows for in getting it on. But the Partisan ones haven't—you just step into the garment and put it on, then slip your arms under the elastic straps, and there you are! Now, before I finish the brassiere goes on in the front, but naturally tapers down to the side back, rather than ending precisely at each side under the arm, as the illustration seems to show. This you can easily see when you attach it to the tip of your garment. Also, if you wish you can whalebone, look at a y corset you have and see how you can easily slip one in wherever you think you need them in this garment.

This is Abner.
Abner is sitting in a boat.
What is Abner sitting in a boat for?
Abner is fishing.
For what?
He isn't fussy and will take anything.

How long will Abner sit in the boat like that?
Abner will sit in the boat all day.
Will he catch anything?
Nothing to speak of.
What is the sense of sitting in a boat all day and not catching anything to speak of?
There is no sense to it.
After Abner has sat in the boat

all day and caught nothing to speak of will he give up fishing?
Don't be ridiculous; Abner will be out there in the hot sun again the first chance he gets.
And will he catch anything next time?
No.
How do you explain it?
It's an old Spanish custom.

THE STORY OF PRUNELLA

1. Once upon a time there was a little girl named Prunella Smolk. She was pretty dumb.
2. In school she was at the bottom of her class of 40 pupils, none of whom were overbright.
3. She had what is known as slow perceptions and found it difficult to grasp things.
4. If you wanted an answer to a problem, Prunella was the last one you would go to, and even on simple questions she was practically null and void.
5. When she grew up to young womanhood she was the death of the party. Her conversation was limited to remarks like "Yeah", "Huh" and "Uhh". She would have to think a long time before answering a query such as "Isn't it warm?"
6. Folks all said she would be a fizzle in life and wondered what would become of her. Men avoided her. She never knew what it was to be "necked" or "petted".
7. Nobody ever proposed to her and so as time went on she realized that she would have to be self-supporting. So she got a job and the next thing the folks back home knew she was getting $50,000 a year.

8. You could have smacked them over with a feather.
9. "My goodness, what ever do you suppose she is doing?" asked the folks back home.
10. Most of their guesses were all wrong, and no wonder, for Prunella had landed the last job in the world anybody would have imagined.

11. She had landed a job on a metropolitan paper, it seems, and had ultimately become a feature writer. Her department, believe it or not, was one which answered practically all questions, however complex, right off the bat and with no hesitation. It was called "Advice to the Lovesick" and, believe it or not, Our Prunella had gone over in a big way giving answers to all questions involved in love, courtship, marriage, domestic relations and even the care of babies.
12. Which was all the more flabbergasting when you consider that Prunella had always been slow getting at the bottom of things and had never known any love outside of that which comes on birthday cards from distant aunts and cousins.
13. Her stuff was ultimately running in 400 newspapers and she had an international reputation as a woman who could give you the right answer to any problem.
14. And she prospered into a ripe old age.

JUDGE RUTHERFORD SAYS:

"The greatest truth that all men must learn is that of and concerning the Kingdom of God. That Kingdom will completely vindicate God's Word and His name and it will bring paradise and endless joy to the people.
"It is now God's due time for the truth to be made known and nothing Satan can do or will do can prevent the truth from being known.
"There is an abundance of Scriptural evidence as well as proof outside of the Scriptures that God's kingdom is at hand and within a short time, Satan's organization will be completely destroyed.
"The clergy claim that the members of the church are being selected so that they can escape torment and at death find a home in heaven. That statement is wholly untrue.
"The people in general have been induced to believe that the end of the world means the beginning of terrible suffering which shall continue forever. The facts are that a great change from an extremely selfish government to one that is wholly unselfish and righteous is just at hand.
"Jehovah God has permitted Satan to go his limit in fraud, deception and wickedness. Now, the time is at hand to demonstrate to all creation who is right and who is supreme in power."

JUDGE RUTHERFORD CAN BE HEARD EVERY WEEK OVER MORE THAN 243 RADIO STATIONS

TUNE IN WOC, Davenport and WHO, Des Moines, 1000 kc., EVERY SUNDAY MORNING, 10:00 to 10:15. Hear the PROOF from your own Bibles that Jehovah God's Kingdom will soon be fully established right here on this earth.
